The DIMMER VIEW

by Max Goodwin

Attend a Budget Hearing —and Save

"Americans are fat and apathetic," is the way at least one of our enemies view us.

That is one of the reasons the Viet Cong keeps up the battle. They think we'll soon tire of fighting because we don't care.

That is also one of the reasons why your government doesn't put the brakes on spending — and taxing.

Taxing agencies are scott-free, as a general rule. They sit as public bodies; conduct business in public, and proceed to levy whatever taxes they need without a note of dissent from the taxpayer.

The average taxpayer bristles at such a charge and claims his interest is high. He claims he is vocal about high taxes. And often he is — usually to his barber, or the bartender, or the little woman. But not at the right time nor place. It should be to those who approve budgets at the time the dough is being budgeted.

Locally, taxpayers are among the most apathetic in the nation.

Let him who argues the point first consider this fact: Last week directors of the local fire districts held budget meetings. This is the place where directors consider any objection to the amount or the way money is being collected and spent.

In Spring Valley the trustees offered a budget of $403,000. It passed.

In Lemon Grove the budget was for $287,000. It passed.

There was nothing wrong with either budget. Funds were spent for salaries and other necessities.

But both hearings had a thing in common.

Not one solitary soul attended the budget hearing.

Imagine that. Almost $700,000 worth of your income being spent without any interest from you.

A small handful of people at a budget hearing would cause any board to avert wasting money on unwise projects.

A small group could cut out all the waste . . . if such there be.

Such is the potency of small groups at public meetings.

Interested citizens are urged to attend such hearings. It is too late for the fire district budget hearings, but schools are involved in budgets right now.

We suspect that you could find little fat in either the fire district or school district budgets. But your attendance assures that fat would be kept out in the future.

'Seeding' the Weed

One of our better tipsters gave us a frightening item of information the other day.

Because he is a newspaperman of considerable note, we gave his tip more credence than we would have otherwise.

He said that pushers are now "seeding" marijuana with the more addictive drugs and youngsters become unconsciously addicted to the hard stuff.

The Sheriff's narcotics detail said that it is not very probable since it would take about $30-$40 worth of opium to soak, or seed, a $10 lid of marijuana.

But then there are many of us who said that we'd never see the day when drug use would be prevalent among American kids.

SOMETHING FOR EVERYBODY OVER 100 — Local Social Security manager Sumio Oto presents a birthday card to Pedro La Chappa last week. La Chappa is a long-time recipient of Social Security. Special notice is given to all recipients after they reach 100, according to Oto, at right.

Social Security Says 'Happy 102' To Campo Indian

Although he was 102 years old last Saturday, Pedro La Chappa saw no reason to become overly excited about it all.

He quietly observed his birthday at Rt. 1, Box 808, in Campo, and even took time out for a couple of naps in the afternoon.

La Chappa was born on the Campo Indian Reservation June 14, 1867, and has lived there all of his life. He has been staying with his daughter, Lupe La Chappa, on the Reservation since his wife, Carmelita, died in 1965.

Sumio Oto, manager of the El Cajon Social Security Office, presented La Chappa with a personal birthday greeting card Saturday.

La Chappa still walks about the yard, chopping weeds, without the use of a cane. He still sharpens his hoe and axe and puts in new handles when needed. Although he is a little hard of hearing, he wears no glasses.

La Chappa has five daughters, all living in California, and 10 grandchildren.

Meanwhile, Social Security has supplied answers to some of the more commonly asked

Tax Ceiling Election Passes By 134 Votes in Lemon Grove

Lemon Grove voters gave approval to the raising the ceiling of the operational tax Tuesday — but the approval was anything but hearty.

It passed 1,739 to 1,605 for a 134 margin.

It permits the board of trustees of the elementary district to call upon taxpayers for as much as $80 more for each $100 of the assessed valuation of their property.

Specifically, it raises the ceiling from $1.99 to $2.79 of each $100 valuation.

It will be used to help trustees finalize the 1969-70 budget which Superintendent Byron Netzey estimated to be about $280,000 short of "absolute needs."

Trustees could not attack the budget properly during the past 36 days of study because none knew whether or not the district would have to go "Spartan." In such a case several programs might have been dropped; busing reduced; personnel reduced and room population increased.

Netzey said he and the board will commence budget considerations in earnest Monday with the idea of "seeing how little of the increase we can get by on."

They will be studying a budget that has $3.1 millions of expenses in it. The budget covering the year ending June 30 called for expenditure of $2.8 millions.

Netzey said Wednesday that not more than 70 cents of the 80 cents increase would be used "and hopefully we can move off more than that. We will move as far away from the maximum as we possible can."

He said that taxpayers should attend the budget meetings which are held at the Education Center. Kempf and Lincoln, to assure themselves that only vital items are being approved by the school board. The meeting Tuesday is at 7:30 p.m.

By precincts, here is how the vote went:

Monterey Heights, 311-254, plus 57

San Altos, 281-164, plus 117

San Miguel, 269-263, plus 6

Vista La Mesa, 233-246, minus 13

L.G. Jr. High, 155-155, even

Palm Jr. High, 238-256, minus 18

Dist. Office, 242-248, minus 6

Absentee Ballots, 10-19, minus 9

Precinct count totals here are unofficial but are usually correct.

One bright spot on the school tax horizon is a bill now in Legislature that could ease the property-owner's burden. It will provide $200 million additionally for state school aid. It started through at $100 million, Netzey said, and has been increased and moved. "It is still moving through committees and passage looks hopeful," he said.

"It could make a lot of difference in our school taxes," he added.

Colonel's Sign Request Gets Finger Lickin' Turndown

SAN DIEGO (CNA) — The county planning commission has rejected a variance for the colonel.

The commissioners could not see why an advertising sign visible from Freeway 94 in Lemon Grove, fried chicken bucket and all, was necessary for a chicken processing plant.

The colonel's Lemon Grove plant, according to representatives Joe Finkleberg, does $300,000 of business monthly with more to come.

The plant supplies the stores in several counties, including Los Angeles.

This testimony still does not convince the commission that a processing plant in a light manufacturing area needs a sign that greatly resembled a regular outdoor advertising billboard.

The regular height limit in the M zone is 35 feet. The company had asked for a sign 79 feet high. The staff had recommended 44 feet to match other variances in the area which is below the freeway level.

The commission granted nothing, but the decision is likely to be appealed to the board of supervisors.

Commission members indicated they could not buy the story that a big billboard was necessary so that drivers delivering chicken to the plant could find it.

Supervisor Asks Funds For Dope Education

SAN DIEGO (CNA)

County Supervisor Jack Walsh recommended Thursday to the Board of Supervisors that the county must spend as much money relatively on education against drug abuse as the City of San Diego now spends on support of its zoo — two cents on the tax rate.

Walsh would have the county put it up to $480,000 in the budget for the next fiscal year. Half would go to using news media, especially television, for informational material and the other half for rehabilitative efforts.

At the same time, Walsh questioned the need for four more deputy sheriffs to work

Jones Family, 335 From Area Set For Assembly

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. Jones and daughters Brenda 15, Karen 14, and sons Martin 13, Jeff 5, of 3836 Agua Dulce, Spring Valley, are making plans to attend the International Assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses.

Carrying the theme: "Peace on Earth" it is scheduled from Monday, July 14 through Sunday, July 20 at the Los Angeles Dodger Stadium.

A total of 335 are expected to attend the event from the Spring Valley and Lemon Grove areas — fathers, mothers, sons and daughters serving as delegates.

Concerned about the current student revolt and violence that is spreading worldwide, Jones, a presiding minister of the Lemon Grove Congregation, pointed out: "Young persons would do well to face up to the fact that more violence will not change the direction the world is taking! The growing rebellion and skyrocketing lawlessness will not produce law and order."

"What students often overlook is that those in revolt are not proposing any workable substitute. There is much talk but enormous disagreement." Conventions of Jehovah's witnesses are a regular part of their educational program in the righteous laws and principles of God's Word and are designed for governing all members of the family.

All interested persons are invited to attend the International Assembly.

Home Ec Building Shows Signs Of Del Mar Fair's Opening

DEL MAR — Even though the gates of the Southern California Exposition at the Del Mar Fairgrounds will not swing open for almost a week (June 25) definite signs of its opening are apparent in the Home Economics Building.

This year, as for the past nine years, Beth Kepner will be supervising all the exhibits. Preparing for the event, she kept Beth busy for months making decision, revisions and scurrying about all over San Diego County.

This year Beth didn't have to come up with a workable suitable theme to tie all the assorted displays together under the roof of the spacious Home Economics Building. The theme — San Diego's 200th Anniversary — was ready-made and had been brewing and baking for many months throughout San Diego County.

Of course, Beth is quick to admit that she will only be doing part of the "spelling out" for the 200th. She expects that women all over the county are "spelling out" San Diego's 200th Anniversary in pink and yellow frosting on cakes, in red, white and blue stitchery on fancy napkins, in crisp cross patterns on quilts and in threads woven into fabrics.

As far as she is concerned the more vivid and varied is the anniversary salute in the Home Economics Building during the Southern California Exposition from June 25 through July 6, the happier everyone will be.

At this point in the preparations, the Home Ec Building resembles a huge barn-like stage being readied for a run of the summer playhouse season, more than it does an exhibit hall for all the best homemakers' prize winning projects. Workmen are building stages, Beth is marking off chalk directions on the floor and audience benches are being put in place.

It is obvious that the home making arts of the past 200 years will have a prominent place in Beth's display plans, when she speaks with such pleasure of the Quilting Bee — not a modern innovation in anyone's judgment — which is returning to the Fairgrounds at the west end of the Home Ec Building this year. It was noticeably absent last year, after having been a popular attraction in 1965, 1966 and 1967.

As in previous years, the daily Quilting Bee will be conducted by members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints of San Diego Stake. This year a larger stage, with a spotlight is being arranged for them. These expert quilters will quilt and show their skill with thread and needle at the quilting frame while visitors to the Exposition observe them.

Some Fair visitors claim they actually learned this almost lost craft, by observing the quilters and asking them questions.

During the 12 days of the Exposition, the women will be busy at their quilting 11 hours a day that the Home Ec Building is open. Six women quilt in each four hour shift. Other women are in the booth to answer questions from the audience. Usually they complete three full-size quilts and one crib-size quilt before the Exposition is over.

Months before they set up their quilting frame in the Home Economics Building, the women are busy at home making tops for the quilts, some in applique, some cross-stitched and others in solid colors with floral patterns.

San Diego Astronomy Association Members Look And Listen To Learn More About The Universe

Some Build Telescopes To Observe; All Hear Lectures From Experts

By JOHN GRUBER JR.

Many San Diegans are closely associated with the Space Age.

Some are directly involved helping to design, engineer and manufacture the complex components that make up space hardware.

Others, such as Lt. Col. William Anders, the Apollo 8 astronaut whose hometown is La Mesa (his wife Valerie is from Lemon Grove — the former Miss Valerie Hoard), are literally working out of this world in deep space. Their lives and careers are staked on the reliability of those rockets poised on Cape Kennedy's launch pads.

Another group of San Diegans is also interested in space and the heavens. They are amateurs. All 80 of them share a common interest in observing the skies and they hold one program meeting a month in Balboa Park which augments their interesting field trips. The group is called San Diego Astronomy Association.

SDAA is "an organization of people from all walks of life who share a common interest in astronomy and the related physical sciences," according to the Association's brochure. It was incorporated in 1963 as a non-profit educational association. "Some members own telescopes — some have binoculars — and some have only their eyes and a fascination for the changing panorama of the night-time sky," reads the brochure in an apt description of two members on the Association's Board of Directors, Howard L. McCalla, vice-president and Edward F. Anderson, treasurer.

McCalla of 1845 Primera st., Lemon Grove was the Association's president last year. He is also President of Western Amateur Astronomers and General Chairman for the WAA Convention which will be held at the Stardust, August 21-23. At age 49 he is an "oldtimer" with the telescope. While some have only recently "discovered" the beauty and adventure in space and the heavenly bodies — and have linked that adventure with astronauts, cosmonauts and daring-do — others have long appreciated it.

It was in 1948 when McCalla first became interested in astronomy. He has long enjoyed that "changing panorama of the night-time sky." He was teaching driver education at an Oakland, Calif. high school. The car he used for driver training was kept in a garage at nearby Chabot Observatory. The custodian there was an amateur astronomer and he allowed McCalla to use his equipment.

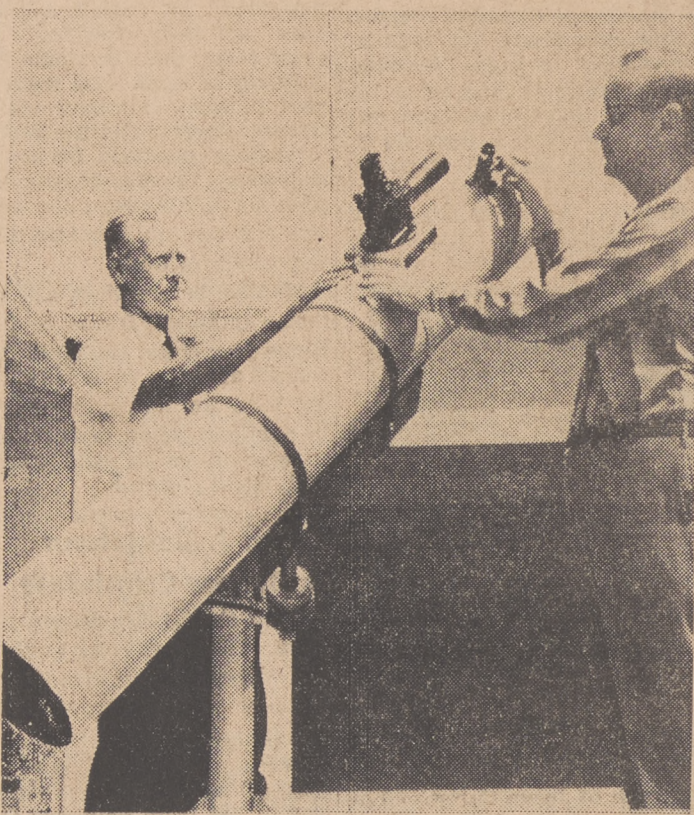

This was how McCalla was introduced to an avocation which has provided many rewards in a limited amount of free time. (He is employed on the staff of the city manager.)

"Basically there are two kinds of amateur astronomers," McCalla says, "there are those primarily interested in observing, and those interested in optics and the problems of making telescopes . . . those who make telescopes as a hobby." McCalla fits in both categories.

He built his first telescope here in San Diego. With different combinations of eyepieces, McCalla says the telescope allows viewing from 50-400 power. It is an eight-inch reflector and weighs between 150-170 pounds. McCalla made the metal base for the telescope at an adult evening class. (SDAA has sponsored a class in telescope building since 1963 when it was held at Crawford High School, for the past few years it has been offered at Clairemont High School as part of the adult evening education program, and it is now taught by John Kerr.)

Twenty pounds of lead balances the telescope to make it easier to pivot and aim at the desired target. The tube of McCalla's telescope is painted with a fast-drying yellow resin and was hardened by applying a fiberglass coating in the same manner as surfers work surfboards. A war surplus gunscope provides an efficient sighting device.

On occasion McCalla will move his eight-inch reflector from the garage of his Lemon Grove home out onto the driveway. He says he views the moon principally, but also some of the planets such as Jupiter. "Best observing is at a lower power," he says. This is contrary to popular opinion according to McCalla, but "at the higher power you are also magnifying all the disturbances in the air. I have more fun looking at the moon with the lowest power eyepiece."

EIGHT-INCH EYE ON THE SKY — Edward Anderson (L) helps check out a telescope built by Howard McCalla (R) of Lemon Grove. McCalla is President of Western Amateur Astronomers, an organization with members in 13 western states, and Vice-President of San Diego Astronomy Association.

Anderson of 9345 Vista Dr., Spring Valley is Treasurer of SDAA. He was a machinist at North Island before retiring in 1966.

Seeing is THE thing for many astronomers, and they like to have the best possible conditions. McCalla says the value of direct observation is reflected in the Biblical quotation which he has seen over the arched doorway of an amateur astronomer's club. It read "The heavens proclaim the glory of God."

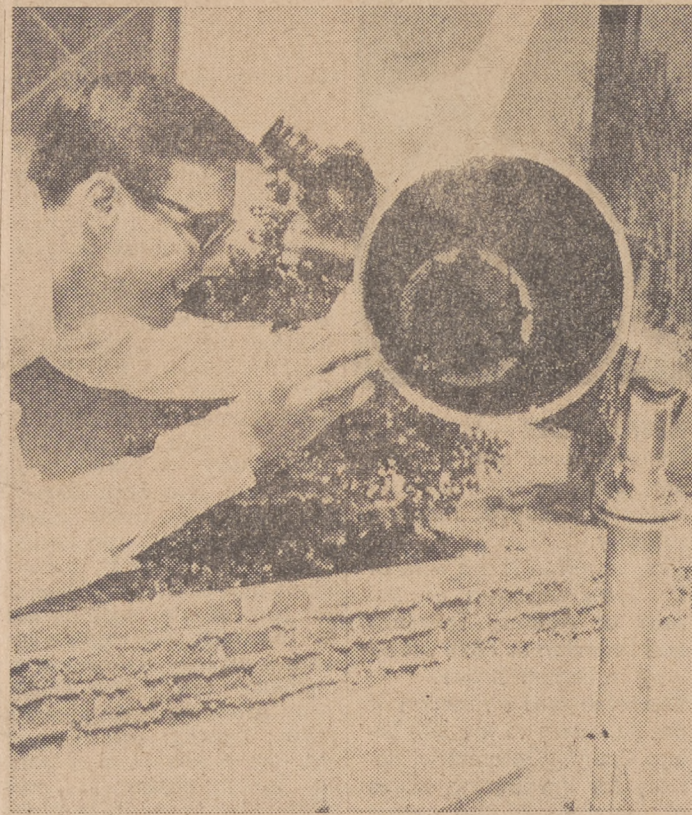

Seeing means just as much to the astronomer as to a distinguished biologist and paleontologist who said: "... the whole of life lies in that verb — if not ultimately, at least essentially . . . union increases only through an increase in consciousness, that is to say in vision. And that, doubtless, is why the history of the living world can be summarized as the elaboration of ever more perfect eyes within a cosmos in which there is always something more to be seen . . . To try to see more and better is not a matter of whim or curiosity or self-indulgence. To see or to perish is the very condition laid upon everything that makes up the universe, by reason of the mysterious gift of existence. And this, in superior measure, is man's condition."

To facilitate group participation in observing, the Association holds "Star Parties" about once a month in an easily accessible area in the mountains. "Alpine has been the most popular place we've found for public 'Star Parties,'" McCalla says.

Even though other locations are better suited for observational qualities, McCalla says they aren't chosen because they are simply harder for the group to find. "Thirty miles back in the Lagunas is the best place for darkness," McCalla says. And so the Association picks a closer site to compromise. The Daley ranch has been the site for several such "Star Parties."

At the last "Star Party" ten or twelve people brought their own instruments. Members are encouraged to bring their own instruments. They share their equipment and exchange their views on astronomy. Families and visitors are always welcome on outings, McCalla says.

Edward Anderson says "Often some (members) bring binoculars because of the fun of sheer looking." The club is by no means limited to those who do not have instruments.

SIGHTING THROUGH TELESCOPE — Douglas McCalla, 20, makes astronomy a family affair. A student at Grossmont College, he is interested in science and engineering, yet makes time for handling photographic work during observations with the telescope. He has adapted a 35mm camera to the telescope to obtain clear black and white, and color photographs of the moon and sky.

One photograph he took through the 400 power telescope shows amazing detail of an alternate landing site for upcoming Apollo 11 moonflight.

Anderson has been a member about one year. He too became interested in astronomy some time back. It was in 1925 when he was in high school in Minneapolis, that he observed the planet Saturn through a telescope. He later found out that the instructor describing the planet during that night's observing was a young man who later became famous in the field.

Besides actually observing celestial bodies, SDAA members learn about their evocation at a monthly meeting (held on the third Friday of each month). These meetings are open to the public and usually feature an illustrated lecture by a professional or advanced amateur astronomer. Lectures are pitched to the understanding of the amateur and general public.

Recent speakers have been Dr. Clarence T. Daub, Jr., assistant professor of Astronomy at San Diego State College, who spoke on "Evolution of Stars," and Dr. Margaret Burbidge, internationally known astronomer from UCSD, who spoke on "Quasars and Probes of Deep Space."

Now (June 12) that the Apollo 11 moonflight has been given the go-ahead from NASA for a July 16 launch and July 20 landing almost everyone is looking at the moon and space with renewed interest. Newspapers and television have been giving in-depth coverage of the events and extolling the epic nature of the trip.

Critics of the Apollo program such as Walter Lippman and Linus Pauling will probably be remembered as feeble voices of the past long after man's first stage of exploration of the moon (in that new frontier of space) has been accomplished.

If the enthusiasm of Howard McCalla and Edward Anderson is indicative of SDAA members who have long appreciated those night-time panoramas, their voices if heard would probably say "We told you so, the beauty and glory has always been there even if the benefits to mankind were not always evident."

SDAA members have "set sail on this new sea," — they have been to the moon and it has been worth it.

41-Year Career

Taught 5,000

English Teacher Harold Goss Retires From Monte Vista High

Monte Vista High School English teacher Harold Goss will end a 41-year teaching career when he retires this month.

Estimating that he has taught over 5,000 students, Goss has served in the Grossmont Unified High School District for the last 27 years, holding faculty positions at Grossmont, Mt. Miguel and Monte Vista high schools.

Looking back over his years in the profession, Goss notes many changes. Teaching has improved, he said, "because better support of schools has freed teachers from menial chores and permitted them to teach."

He said he has also noticed a change in students. "I have more able students now, but often they have less purpose," he said.

"Too many of them are unwilling to put out; many are only searching for easy courses."

There were humorous moments, he said, "lots of them — just last year a student while reciting the poem 'Crucifixion' instead of saying, 'In his wake the hot hounds churned' mistakenly substituted 'hot dogs' — and brought down the house."

Goss started his teaching career in Pennsylvania after obtaining a degree from U.S.C. in 1928. He received his master's degree in English from the University of Pittsburgh in 1932.

Teachers and administrators from throughout the district honored the retiring teacher at a reception held last month in the school library.

There's No Game Like Baseball? Laundry Baskets And Grapefruit Take Place Of Gloves, Baseball

By LINDA ORTEGA

Amidst the organized confusion, the untiring umpires and battling board, alias "The Executives," and the mighty managers and courageous coaches, alias "Charlie Brown's Allstars," clashed in a grudge game held June 8 for the enjoyment of the Valley Mesa Bobby Sox Softball League.

It was an event to remember as the two teams battled it out in a hilarious game where just about anything was illegal from catching balls with laundry baskets to using grapefruit in place of a softball.

It was a fun day for all with free balloons, refreshments, and drawing prizes. Even the spectators were part of the game as they roared for their favorite team and applauded "spectacular plays" by the teams.

Although there were a few home runs, not much serious playing was done. Instead, balloons were placed under the bases to scare off the runners but usually it was the fielders who got the score.

Also, such maneuvers as putting more than three players in the outfield and using more than one ball to tag out the runners and generally confuse the other team were used.

One tactic used that must be a "first in history" was to charge one player with the sole task of placing a laundry basket where he/she thought the batter would hit the ball. However, the ball only hit the basket once and then bounced out.

The players themselves were definitely dressed for the occasion. The catcher of one team was decked in bright orange coveralls in which he had candies and cookies hidden to bribe the umpires with.

It wasn't unusual to see two different colored tennis shoes on one player or to see ladies playing, exhibiting the "latest original look" in hats and costumes.

Spectators witnessed "The Executives" coming out as the victorious in this game of the year. At the end of the game, the winning team let out this cheer: "Three, five, seven, nine, better luck next time" to which the losing team replied, "two, four, six, eight, we know you we especially hate."

Bases Stand On Case Studies

Dr. Max Rafferty Supports Inclusion Of Fallout Shelters In New School Construction

Three state officials have joined in urging "full consideration, where economically feasible, to the inclusion of fallout shelters wherever new school facilities, alteration or additions are being programmed."

Superintendent of Public Instruction and Director of Education Dr. Max Rafferty, Department of General Services Director Andrew R. Lolli, and Director of the California Disaster Officer Charles P. Samson, made this recommendation in a letter sent today to school and local government officials.

The recommendation is based on case studies made in existing elementary and secondary schools in Tulare, Sacramento, San Bernardino, San Francisco, Fresno, and Contra Costa Counties.

The studies were conducted by the Department of Architecture, University of Utah, in cooperation with the Bureau of School Planning, California Department of Education, and were funded by the federal Office of Civil Defense.

Purpose of the study was to determine: Can fallout shelter be included at the same time and at minimum cost when existing school plants are being replanned to accommodate present and future needs, or whenever structural modifications are required to meet specific criteria for earthquakes.

Study findings are published in a new federal publication entitled "EXISTING SCHOOLS: THEIR FUTURE" available through the California Disaster Office.

Rafferty, Lolli, and Samson stated "We believe the results of the study are unique in that they not only present new ideas for upgrading existing schools but also include consideration of fallout protection. The threat of nuclear war, even though it may appear remote, must still be acknowledged and considered."

The inclusion of fallout shelters in school plants is supported by a policy of the Office of Architecture and Construction, Department of General Services, which requires that fallout shelter space be considered in the design of all future state buildings where it is economically feasible.

Director Samson said that the inclusion of shelters in schools is consistent with the State's objective of fallout protection for all Californians.

Helix High PTA Awards Scholarships

The following Helix High School students were presented with scholarships by the Helix PTA in an awards assembly June 11.

Lenore Johnson was awarded a special $200 Keith Woodfield memorial scholarship. Miss Johnson is an honor student in one of Mr. Woodfield's Social Science classes.

Susan Leslie, Roberta Merritt, and Michael Singer each received a $100 scholarship to aid in their college education.

Christine Lorenzen, who is planning to attend Grossmont Jr. College in the fall, received a $100 scholarship.

Gregory Schinke also was awarded a $100 Scholarship to further the extra training that is required in his field.

Mrs. E. M. Villarin reports that it was the aim of the PTA to present scholarships, not only to college bound students, but ones in other departments who will need further training.

These scholarships were made possible by the PTA summer school snack program last year.

The Kathiwar peninsula of India is perhaps the last stand of wild lions in Asia. Elsewhere they are now practically extinct.

EXTERMINATOR — Norma White, a Spring Valley grandmother, is the west coast's only female pest exterminator. In the photo she is using one of the small spray devices for controlling "crawlers". Her job is to remove all types of pests from client's premises — "even a skunk from the basement."

Pest Exterminating Profession Rewarding For Youthful Grandma

A pert, shapely grandmother who lives in Spring Valley, is said to be the only woman pest control technician in the west.

Norma J. White, who lives at 8926 Kenwood dr., kills roaches, mice, termites, ants and other pests for a living — "and loves it."

She joined San Diego Exterminating earlier this year for on-the-job training and the firm's general manager Bob Limpus says "she has it made."

We hired her as an experiment but she has proven so satisfactory that we may hire other women."

Mrs. White, he said, may indeed be the only woman in the United States in the profession who actually does the exterminating.

"We read an item in a magazine about a woman in Boston who was said to be an exterminator but we couldn't locate her," he said.

Mrs. White says her job is rewarding. It is a worried client we respond to, she explained. Their worries change to gratitude after we relieve them of their problems, she said.

"One of my first jobs was to rid the roof of a nearly finished building of bees. The roofers couldn't work. I was working with my supervisor. He got stung, but I didn't. But we got rid of the bees in a hurry," she said.

Her biggest job was a few weeks ago when she was called on a flea job. "It was a lumber warehouse covering almost a half of a block. We solved that problem in one visit," she said.

She drives one of the firm's trucks and applies the control liquids and substances, often using a motor-powered spray device. She works mostly in the downtown San Diego area providing service to hotels, bars, restaurants, theatres, stores, residences and even to produce firms. The most persistent pest is the roach and each client have one thing in common — they blame their neighbor, she said. Mice are the major pests around produce houses, she said. "We set up continuing controls in such instances — usually on a 30-day cycle," she explained.

Mrs. White will take an examination in Los Angeles soon for one of three state licenses she hopes to qualify for.

Her immediate supervisor, Dick Bordwell, who is also a local resident, said that she has all the pest control capabilities of a man, plus the clean and neat qualities of a woman. "It makes her a top technician," he said. Bordwell lives at 3432 Par dr., Brookside.

Mrs. White's grandson, two-year old Tommy Phillips lives in Oregon with his parents. Mrs. White is the daughter of Ted Feters, operator of Pal's Cafe at Imperial and Lester avenues in Lemon Grove.

SKATERS — Winners of Skyline Rollarena Beauty Contest: Queen Jane Auberger, Junior Miss Randy Cooper and Princess Shelley McMillion.

Jane Auberger Named Queen In Local Skate-Beauty Contest

Winners were named recently in a group of beauty contests at the Skyline Rollarena in Lomita Village.

Jane Auberger, of Spring Valley, a junior at Mt. Miguel High School, was selected as queen. She will represent the Skyline Rollarena Dance and Figure Club in the Roller Skating Queen contest at the Southwest Pacific Regional Roller Skating championships later this month at Bakersfield. Winner there will compete in Little Rock, Ark. in August at the RSROA national.

Miss Auberger won in the over-16 group. Other winners are: Princess, 13-15, Shelley McMillion, Spring Valley, and Junior Miss, 4-12, Randy Cooper, age 5, of Chula Vista.

Co-Editors To Guide 'Royal Page' In Fall Semester At Monte Vista

Advanced journalism students, Robbie Clemesha and Julie Cotton, have been named co-editors of the Royal Page, the Monte Vista High School newspaper, for the fall semester.

Miss Clemesha is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Clemesha of 4529 Taft pl., La Mesa. Miss Cotton is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Cotton of 1003 Norte Mesa dr., Spring Valley.

Paul Loop, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Loop of 10451 Loma Rancho dr., Spring Valley, will serve as sports editor of the paper.

Steve Wilcox, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Wilcox of La Mesa, will fill the ad manager's part. All four students will be seniors in the fall.

"The editors and ad manager will select their staffs when school opens," Mrs. Mary Streib, journalism advisor, said.

Next year for the first time at Monte Vista, new editors will be chosen to serve during the second semester. "This will allow the sharing of experience and responsibility among a maximum number of staff members," Mrs. Streib said.

Heartland 'Y' Plans Schedule Of Summer Fun

With the end of school, boys and girls, ages 6-11 can join with the Heartland YMCA in their annual 10-week day camp.

There will be five 2-week sessions (June 23-August 29) to be held in El Monte and Flinn Springs county parks.

The day begins with bus pick-up at nearby schools and children are taken to the parks for archery, arts and crafts, sports, movement education, bowling, swimming, nature study and hiking.

Trips to points of interest in the community are scheduled weekly. Tours of ships, Fiesta 200, the zoo, Bird Rock, local industries and parks are planned.

For junior and senior high students there will be on-going programs centered at the Heartland 'Y'. Programs will include dances, fun nights, dialogue sessions and trips. At summer's end, there will be a week long caravan to Yosemite for junior high fellows and girls.

High school students will have the opportunity to select from three trips: a back-pack trip into the High Sierras; a two-week western U.S. tour which will include Grand Canyon, Yellowstone, Glacier and other national parks; plus a week long caravan trip into Yosemite.

Additional information can be secured by coming to the Heartland YMCA at 8881 Dallas, La Mesa, or calling 466-4161.

Of this recommendation of Chief Administrative Officer Fred Morey, Walsh said, "Arrests do not solve drug abuse problems, may actually result in experimenters rebelling and turning towards more intense us, and are the most expensive and least effective means to solve a deep-rooted social behavior problem."

The submission of the programs was the first important public statement of the new young Supervisor from Point Loma. Walsh took office in January after beating Frank Gibson easily.

Of the drug situation, Walsh said, "The illegal use of drugs is of epidemic proportions."

"Arrests (representing a small percent of users) are doubling each year and drug overdose deaths last year reached 101."

"The measurable costs to county taxpayers to arrest, prosecute and detain drug offenders is conservatively calculated to exceed $7 million annually."

Death through the use of too much drugs or narcotics has become so common that it is merely referred to as an O.D. by a great many people.

Social Security

Q. I retired last year, and I now want to get a job working part-time to increase my income. How much can I earn and not lose any of my social security benefits?

A. Persons receiving monthly social security payments can earn as much as $1,680 this year and still receive benefits for every month of the year.

Q. I have several doctor bills and wish to file a claim for Medicare payment. Could you tell me briefly how I should file my first claim?

A. Since you have never filed a Medicare claim before, I would suggest that you visit your social security office and let one of the representatives assist you with the first one.

Be sure to bring all of your itemized bills and your Medicare card. You can file your claim even though none of the bills have been paid.

Q. I am a widow with three minor children, and we receive social security benefits. I have been offered a job that will pay me over $5,000 a year. If I take this job, will it cause my children's checks to be stopped?

A. No. Your earnings affect only your own social security checks; not those of your children.

Q. How can I find out if a hospital, skilled nursing home, or home health agency is participating in the Medicare program?

A. You can ask the people at the hospital, nursing home or agency or you can ask your nearest social security office.

Q. I am 37 years old. If I should become too disabled to work, when should I let my social security office know?

A. As soon as it appears that your disabling condition will last at least 12 months.

Q. How do I collect from Medicare the amount it is supposed to pay on my hospital bill?

A. You don't have to do anything. The hospital makes the claim for the amount due under Medicare hospital insurance.

Q. I am 63 and still working. I plan to retire next year when I reach 64. Should I wait until I retire to apply for social security benefits?

A. No; apply two or three months before you intend to retire so that your first check will reach you on time. If you wait until the month you retire, your first check could be delayed.

Q. I was in a hospital recently and my doctor had to visit me every day. He charged me $8 for each visit. May I include these charges in a claim I am putting in for bills I have paid for visits to his office?

A. Yes. Physician's services are covered by your medical insurance no matter where you receive them — in the doctor's office, in the hospital, your home, or elsewhere in the United States.
